

A Method for Manufacturing Fuel Cell Components by Low Temperature Processing

ABSTRACT

A method for forming a fuel cell component includes depositing a hydroxide or oxyhydroxide form of the component, and hydrothermally dehydrating the hydroxide or oxyhydroxide form of the component, wherein the hydrothermally dehydrating of the component establishes the grain structure of the component.